All Elevators will Sell War Saving Certificates

All elevator agents will assist in the sale of war certificates to farmers throughout Western Canada at more than 4,500 country elevators operated by Line Companies, Pools and United Grain Growers it was announced today.

Facilities will be arranged whereby a farmer when delivering grain to the elevator will be enabled to have a cash grain ticket made out direct to the Government for whatever amount of War Savings Certificates he wishes to purchase. This ticket will then be forwarded to Ottawa by the elevator agent and the farmer will receive his War bond direct from Ottawa.

E. J. Tarr, K. C., chairman of the War Savings Committee for Manitoba, expressed appreciation for the co-operation of the Elevator Companies for making available more than 4,500 additional sales outlets in rural areas of the Western Provinces. He urged all farmers who wished to participate in this war effort to arrange the purchase of their certificates at country elevators.

Mr. Hannaford has wonderful place, a revelation of what can be done in the "dry" district if one will take pains and has interest enough to work and beautify his surroundings. He has a nice little park, of an acre or more, surrounded by a clipped hedge of caraganae, as solid as a wall, and about eight feet high. Inside there are lovely flowers and walks.

Mr. Louis Blagen of Sedalia is making a short visit to Chinook staying with his cousin Ervie.

Messrs Bill Youell and Sid Demeare motored to Calgary on Tuesday.

Potential Weapons

Despite dire forebodings, promises and threats, the present war has progressed to within measurable distance of one year without the appearance on the scene of any entirely new destructive agency which would make combat between armed forces futile or impossible.

It is true that due to the greater use of mechanized equipment it has been possible to mete out death and injury to humans and destruction to property on a scale hitherto impossible, but that is the result of organization and improvement of implements and equipment which were known and used in Great War No. 1. No new chemical or physical agency of destruction has been employed, so far as the general public is aware.

The only new device was heralded in advance by Hitler some time ago when he announced that he had something new and terrible with which he was going to sweep the British navy off the ocean. This bogey man later turned out to be the magnetic mine. Insofar as effectiveness was concerned it was more or less of a dupe. The British speedily found methods of coping with it. Within a few weeks of its debut, the German navy had disappeared from the sea lanes with the exception of a few prowling submarines and the Royal Navy continued to patrol the high seas at will and enforce its blockade of supplies for the Hun.

Somewhat Possibilities

This does not necessarily imply, of course, that science may not or will not reveal some secret which may place in the hands of one or other of the belligerents some new agency of immensely greater power or of much wider range than anything that has yet been employed in the science of warfare. If such an agency, that nothing could withstand it, is discovered, it is to be hoped that it will be discovered in Allied or friendly laboratories and that the most extraordinary precautions will be taken to see that it does not fall into the hands of the enemy, for the sake of the very existence of civilization.

In recent months there have been hints of two scientific discoveries, either of which, if capable of practical adaptation to the cause of Mars, would have an overwhelming effect on the course and probably the final outcome of the war. Both, or either, could be utilized as weapons of such tremendous scope and power, that the contemplating of their potentialities as an agency of warfare can only inspire awe and horror, provided first published reports of these discoveries are not grossly exaggerated.

Fortunately, if there is any truth in these stories and if the reported discoveries are scientifically and economically feasible, the finds were made in the United States and it can be taken for granted that the authorities of that country will see to it that either of these secrets do not fall into German hands, lest it lead to their own undoing.

One of these is a so-called death ray which, according to newspaper reports is so powerful that it could be trained upon an aeroplane 250 miles away and at that distance could melt the plane's engine, causing immediate destruction to any aircraft which came within the scope of its range.

The other source of potential destruction is a new form of power which, according to the New York Times, is not far from perfection and which is so revolutionary that it ranks with the invention of the steam engine and later, with the discovery and invention of the principles underlying the internal combustion and Diesel engines.

Not Yet Certain

This new source of power, according to the New York Times, is a natural substance found abundantly in many parts of the earth which, when recently separated in its pure form for the first time at Columbia University, was discovered to be capable of yielding such energy that a pound of it is equal in power output to 5,000,000 pounds of coal or 3,000,000 gallons of gasoline.

All that is necessary to make this tremendous power available to the use or "abuse" of mankind is an improvement in the method of extraction, it is said.

For generations physicists and scientists have dreamed of the possibility of converting the cheap and plentiful energy of the sun into a source of almost unlimited power for the general use of humanity, but so far no economically feasible method of doing so has been found. Perhaps the same fate is in store for the new discovery hailing from Columbia's laboratories. Perhaps it would be just as well if that final step remains unsolved until the war is over, in case the secret gets into the wrong hands to the overwhelming disadvantage of the Allied cause.

Have To Be Careful

"Eastern Lights" Are Way Dutch
Describe British Air Raids

Germany is doing everything she can to hide from the Dutch people the effects of the continual Royal Air Force raids on western Germany, and recently Netherlands were forbidden to visit after dark, a line of hills which give a view far into Germany, the British Broadcasting Corporation reported.

"The Dutch have to be careful what they say about it (the raiding) but here is one description," the B.B.C. said. "The situation across the frontier is perfectly normal except for that curious new phenomenon we observe every night, the 'eastern lights.' Great fires have been seen every night after the British bombers have been over."

Long Record Of Service

Scheme For Canada's Government Annuities Started 32 Years Ago
Canada's government annuities, today a big business with the Dominion, a business which forms part of the working capital of the country has celebrated 32 years of service to Canadians.

The scheme was first suggested by the late P. C. Larkin in a letter to the late Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, in a letter dated July 5, 1906, and mailed from Upper Egypt, where Mr. Larkin was on holiday. Two years later the act which authorizes issue of government annuities was passed.

It was not until 1928, however, that the annuity branch shed its swaddling clothes and started out to become a real force in the business life of the Dominion. Hon. Peter Heenan, then minister of labor, made special efforts to bring the system to the attention of the Canadian people. Some 40 agents, trained for the work under E. G. Blackader, branch superintendent, were placed at points across Canada, among them A. E. Milton, who was appointed Registrar agent in 1929, with headquarters in the post office building.

The results of this procedure startled the business world of Canada. In a single year the business done increased 300 per cent. In 1935 another definite increase was made under the direction of the late Hon. Norman Rogers, then minister of labor, and in 1936-37 contracts issued totalled 7,506 and receipts for the fiscal year totalled $23,614,823.

Money received on account of the purchase of government annuities is deposited in the consolidated revenue fund of Canada and forms an integral part of the working capital of the Dominion.

Now Work In Factories

London's Errand Boys And Girls Have Practically Disappeared

London's perky errand boy has virtually disappeared. When he does come waddling along the path, or is engaged in checking a policeman, he is generally the son of the small shop proprietor, marked down to succeed his dad, and in some cases assisting his mother, the dad having more serious unformed business in hand. The errand boy has now gone into the factories, and he seems to have taken his sister with him, for errand girls are almost as scarce as their brothers.

The errand boy with his bicycle or tricycle was the small shopkeeper's standby. The big stores always had their delivery vans and carmen. But customers are sympathetic and helpful, and the rule is "cash and carry" for the London housewife's sugar and bacon, as well as for American munitions.

Pleas Should Be Disregarded

Any Food Sent To Europe Will Go To Germany

An authoritative statement charged that Germany was stripping occupied territories of virtually all food stocks and raw materials, and, as a result, food shortages were likely this winter, but indirectly warned the U.S. to disregard pleas for food from the occupied countries.

"Germany will be responsible for the feeding of the territories she occupies," the statement said. Pleas which may come from the occupied territories almost certainly will be made at the instigation of the German government, and if food is allowed there, it will be poured into Germany.

In Denmark, according to the statement, each person is rationed to about 2½ pounds of sugar monthly, while the surplus is sent to Germany. The coffee ration is slightly more than half a pound monthly while tea is limited to about two ounces monthly. (The British ration is to be two ounces a week.)

Danish pigs are being slaughtered at such a rate that even the German demand is unable to keep pace with the supply of pork. Strict rationing of oil and fuel is said to be affecting the fishing industry while drought is ruining the pastures and impairing the milk yield.

In Norway, according to the statement, there is an acute shortage of milk and eggs in the towns. No coal or coke is issued to small industries or households. They are compelled to use wood and peat.

An Arab sheik was being taken in a car across a very humpy patch of desert. So bad was the going that at last, the car overturned and the sheik was thrown out. Instead of protesting to the driver, the Arab picked himself up and apologized profusely, saying: "I'm so sorry. I've not learned to ride one of these things yet."

In British Hands

Germany missed a good deal when Norway was captured for virtually the whole of the Norwegian merchant marine, totalling 4,000,000 tons, is in British hands and all of the gold reserve, $100,000,000, is in safe storage in Canada or the United States—fish that Hitler must admit got away from him.

An Unusual Accident

Train Bumped Buffers In Grand Central Terminal, New York

Considering the multitude of trains, the speed, the passings and crossings that have to be planned day and night, the number of accidents is amazingly few. If there were as many people killed and injured on railways in a year as there are in automobile accidents, public patronage would be very small. Accidents do happen occasionally, chiefly in the yards or out on the road, and one of the rarest kinds of accidents occurred the other day right in the Grand Central Terminal, New York, when the train from White Plains was so near stopped that many passengers had left their seats and were standing in the aisle preparatory to getting out. Unfortunately, the trouble was just there. The train was not stopped quite in time; only nearly, the locomotive having too much speed on, or, putting it another way, the engineer failing to apply the brakes in time, with the result that it crashed into the buffers. The jolt was so severe that about 100 people were injured, but only a few seriously.

Hundreds of thousands of trains enter terminals on this continent in the course of a year and rarely do such mishaps occur. But there are always buffers at the end of each platform. The railroad companies put them there—in case. We surmise they are a survival of the old days when the advent of the vacuum brake. Without the vacuum brake, trains could never have attained the speed they have. And they would have to start slowing down long before they do. The type or accident referred to was probably fairly frequent at one time.

But it is still desirable to have buffers—when the human factor fails. St. Thomas Times-Journal.

Change In Regulations

Any Canada Annuities Purchased After June 24 Are Taxable

There appears to be a misconception as to what has happened with respect to Dominion of Canada annuities which are purchasable up to the point where they will provide an income of $1,200 per annum to the holder at a stated age—an income which has heretofore been guaranteed free of income tax! This guarantee will still hold good with respect to annuities purchased before June 24 of this year, but incomes from those purchased after that date will be taxed. Many people have in the past taken only a tiny annuity by paying a dollar or other small sum per year, because they thus got a contract guaranteeing them the same interest rate and freedom from taxation on any larger annuity they may purchase later. This tax-free contractual right is not being abrogated, not with respect to annuities already purchased, but with respect to income of such annuities or entirely new annuities. If a man has an annuity of $600 and increases it to $1,000, the extra $400 will be taxable.—Toronto Star.

Forests More Valuable

Canadians Should Take Extra Care To Prevent Fires

War-time places a new and higher value upon the forests of Canada and the new value in this case goes almost wholly to the wage-earners, merchants, supply houses and others furnishing the employment and services that enter into the manufacture of lumber and paper, according to a statement of the Canadian Forestry Association.

The statement goes on: "Now that the Dominion Government has issued a call for the organized defense of Canada, a new reason is provided and a new opportunity given for every citizen to include the protection of the forests from fire with his patriotic training. The defense of Canada applies to forest fires prevention as well as external enemies. Defending the forests is an immediate personal contribution that every citizen can undertake."

"It is sometimes forgotten that forests never destroy themselves. They are laid in ruins nearly always by the carelessness of human beings. Thousands of forest rangers work from morning till night to save the splendid resources of the provinces from reckless actions of fishermen, campers, smokers, berry-pickers and settlers."

"Every forest fire is a blow to our own home-land, and the consequences of fire grow steadily worse as the timber supplies become less and the distribution of forest wages grow greater."

They carried their find back to the superintendent's office and before his fire thawed it out. When the letter had become a limp and steaming thing Jim stripped the flap of the envelope and carefully withdrew its contents.

Dear Mr. Harlow:

I am afraid I must disappoint you. I am in such a position, being a convict on license, that I cannot afford to take the risk of being seen. I will tell you frankly that what I have in my mind is that this may be a frame-up organized by the police officers. I do not think that they would dare to lay the bones on me to go any further until I know your requirements, or at least have written proof that you have approached me.

Yours sincerely,
ARTHUR INGLE.

The two men looked at one another.

"That beats the band," said Elk. "What do you make of it, Carlton?" Jim stood with his back to the fire, the letter in his hand, his brow wrinkled in a frown.

"I don't know * * * let me try now * * * Harlow asked Ingle to meet him; I knew that already. Ingle promised to go, changed his mind and wrote this letter, which has obviously never been opened by Harlow, and as obviously could not have been delivered to him before the interview, because, as I know—and I had a cold in the head to prove it—these two fellows met opposite the Horse Guards Parade and went joyriding around the park for the greater part of an hour. Supposing Harlow is concerned with the slaying of this wretched woman—and why should kill her heaven knows!—would he carry about this unopened letter and leave it for the first flat-footed policeman to find?"

He sat down in a chair and held his head in his hands, and presently:

"I've got it!" he said, his eyes blazing with excitement. "At least, if I haven't got the whole story, I know at least one thing—poor Mrs. Gibbons was very much in love with James Smith the plate-layer!"

Erik stared at him. "You're talking foolish," he said.

CHAPTER XII.

Aileen Rivers had made one attempt to see her relative. She called up her uncle on the telephone and asked if she might call.

"Why?" was the uncompromising question.

Only a very pressing cause would have induced the girl to make the attempt—a fact which conveyed to Ingle in the next sentence.

"I've had a big bill sent to me for the redecoration of your flat. You remember that you wished this done, Mr. Ingle. The decorators hold me responsible—"

"Send the bill to me; I'll settle it," he interrupted.

"I'm not sure that all the items are exact."

"It doesn't matter," he broke in again. "Send me the bill; I'll settle it. Good morning."

She hung up with a little smile, relieved of the necessity for another interview.

There were times when Aileen Rivers was extremely grateful that no spot of Mr. Ingle's blood ran in her veins. He had married her mother's first cousin, and the avuncular relationship was largely a complimentary one. She felt the need of emphasizing this fact upon Jim Carlton when he called that night—a very welcome visit, though he made it clear to her that the pleasure of seeing her again was not his sole object.

He had come to make inquiries which were a little inconsequent, she thought, about Mrs. Gibbons. He has a sore throat or something. He wanted to know if you'd go round after dinner and take a letter.

"Why, certainly, Mr. Stebbings," she said, surprised that he should be so apologetic.

"He was not a client of mine now, as I think I told you before," the stout Mr. Stebbings went on addressing the chandelier. "And I don't know that I should wish for him to be a client either. Only—"

"Mr. Harlow?" she gasped, and he brought his gaze down to her level.

"Yes, Mr. Harlow, 104 Park Lane. Do you mind?"

"No," she said. She had a struggle before she could agree. "Why, of course I'll go. At what hour?"

"He suggested 9. I said that was rather late, but he told me that he had a dinner engagement. He was most anxious," said Mr. Stebbings, his eyes returning to the Adam ceiling, "that this matter should be kept as quiet as possible."

"What matter?" she asked wonderingly.

"I don't know"—Mr. Stebbings could be exasperately vague—"I rather fancy it may have been the contents of the letter; or, on the other hand, it may have been that he did not wish anybody to know that he had a letter of such importance as would justify the calling in of a special stenographer to deal with it. Naturally I told him he might rely on your discretion. * * * What you that is all?"

She went back to her little room with the disquieting thought that she was committed to spend an hour alone with a man who on his last appearance had filled her with repulsion. She wondered whether she ought to tell Jim Carlton, and she saw the absurdity of telling him of every petty circumstance of her life, every coming and going. She knew he did not like Harlow; that he even suspected that splendid man of being responsible for the attack which had been made upon him in Long Acre; and she was the last to tell his prejudices. There were times when she allowed herself the disloyalty of thinking that Jim leaned a little toward sensationalism.

He called upon farmers to "battle for a new national policy for agriculture in this Dominion" in the face of "disappearing markets and depressing prices."

Mr. Hannan spoke to almost 100 county farm leaders, co-operative growers' officials at the summer meeting of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture, at Hamilton.

He revealed some of the farmer's most pressing problems.

"We have a surplus of something over 20,000,000 pounds of bacon, which surplus has depressed our hog prices during the past few months.

And we have the prospect of a still greater surplus by the first of October."

"Our grain elevators are nearly full of wheat. If we take off an average crop fall there is space in the elevators for only about one-third of it. Ways and means must be found of handling these surpluses and of holding up farm prices and stabilizing them at a figure which will be remunerative to our farm producers."

"Not to do it," Mr. Hannan declared, "is to invite consequences which will be serious to the whole economic and social life of this country."

Typical Of The British

London Paper Wanted Instructive Or Amusing All-Raid Stories

That British humor survives the darkest crisis to brighten the day, is elicited by the following notice appearing on the front page of a copy of the "Evening News," published in Glasgow, Scotland, and dated June 26:

"The Evening News invites its readers to submit stories of last night's air raid. The stories should be instructive or amusing."

A combination gas mask and telephone has been invented for firemen working inside burning buildings.

"I thought of going for a stroll, too," he said, rising laboriously. "I'm not getting enough exercise."

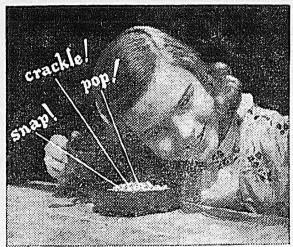

"I'm going to post a letter, that is all," she said, and had the humiliation of making a pretense to drop an imaginary letter into the pillar box under his watchful eye.

She brushed past him as he stood in the doorway, blowing great clouds of smoke from his pipe, and almost ran up the stairs, angry with herself that she should allow so insignificant a pinprick to irritate her.

She did not see the man at breakfast, but as she walked up the steps to the office, she happened to glance around and, to her amazement, saw him lounging on the corner of the square, apparently interested in nothing but the architecture of the fine old Queen Anne mansion which formed the corner block.

This day was to prove for Aileen Rivers something of an emotional strain. She was clearing up her desk preparatory to leaving the office when Mr. Stebbings' bell rang. She went in with her notebook and pencil.

"No, no, no letter; I just have a curious request," said Mr. Stebbings, looking past her. "A very curious and yet a very natural request. An old client of mine * * * his secretary has a sore throat or something. He

Farmers Make Contribution

Calls For Battle For New Agricultural Policy For Canada

"By producing below the cost of production for the first nine months of the war, farmers have already made the greatest contribution to this war of any industrial class or group in the country," Herbert H. Hannan, Toronto, president of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, declared at Hamilton.

He called upon farmers to "battle for a new national policy for agriculture in this Dominion" in the face of "disappearing markets and depressing prices."

India's Treasure Houses

Wealthy People Invest Spare Money
In Jewels And Ornaments

Lady Linlithgow's appeal to the women of India for gold and silver ornaments on behalf of wartime auxiliary activities may have tremendous results. Even now Indians as a body have little faith in banks as we understand them. The banker to them is a lender of money, not its trustee or custodian; as they still adopt the historic method of investing spare wealth in specks and particularly in ornaments for their women folk.

Each rajah or nawab of importance has a treasure house as part of his inheritance, and although, as an educated man of affairs he may have great investments in securities, the treasure house with its contents remains intact. What wealth is stored in India in these various forms no man knows. But when gold went up in price more than £500,000,000 worth appeared, as it were from nowhere, to be melted down as bullion.

Hearts are romantic cards and the girl who draws the Two may expect a proposal. Spades, aces, are unlucky. The King may mean that an old man will interfere in the romance, causing tears.

But, turning to diamonds, you find cards of wealth, good fortune. The Six means a gift of jewelry, perhaps the Eight a large diamond ornament. Clubs stand for business. The Ace foretells a letter with good news, perhaps the offer of a good job—and so happily ever after.

To play cards, tea-leaves, too, reveal secrets. A five-four in dominoes spells a surprise. A group of tea-leaves shaped like a spoon means good luck. A fan of tea-leaves means mystery.

Find out more about these and other exciting fortunes from our 32-page booklet! Gets the meaning of every card in the deck; explains for the beginner how to read tea-leaves and tea-leaves.

Joseph Cook.

All the good of which humanity is capable is comprised in obediency.

Emerson.

No man can always do just as he chooses until he always chooses to do God's will; and that is heaven. There is no liberty in wrongdoing.

Joseph Cook.

We need only obey. There is guidance for each of us, and by lowly listening we shall hear the right word.

Emerson.

Conditions Were Difficult

South African Town Is Proud Of Self-Supporting Men

A self-supporting hen is the boast of Bridgewater, South Africa. When workmen started to rebuild a building wrecked by a cyclone a week before they found in one remaining corner a white leghorn hen in good health, except for slight lameness. She had been saved by an automobile tire that formed a lean-to. Within half an hour she laid an egg, which she promptly began to eat, solving the riddle of food and water under difficult conditions.

Commodities For Armed Forces

Some indication of the extent of the purchases necessary to maintain the armed forces is revealed in figures showing that up to June 1 some four million units of commodities, including blankets, boots, braces, housewives, shirts, socks, blouses and trousers, were ordered by the Department of Munitions and Supply and delivered to Army, Navy and Air Force stores.

The Camerons from Winnipeg (top) proceed to make themselves as indistinguishable as possible in their outpost position at Shilo Camp where they are training. The boys of the Fort Garry Horse, Winnipeg (bottom) practice with an anti-tank rifle in readiness for the day when they will have Nazi tanks at the business end of their gun sights.
